Since 1997, The Rev. Dr. Roy F. Miller and Mrs. Florence Lantz Miller Summer Youth Institute (SYI) at Pittsburgh Theological Seminary has helped young adults and undergraduate learners engage the questions, Who is God calling me to be? What is God calling me to do in the world?

SYI provides opportunities for young adults and those transitioning from college to early career to practice intensive theological reflection and deep vocational discernment through participation in living-learning communities. We believe that young people are uniquely positioned to attend to the diverse works of God in the world, hence our commitment to developing relevant programming that supports young adults in speaking back into our congregations and institutions of higher learning.

We invite you to explore our initiatives and resources for undergraduate and young adult empowerment, theological formation, vocational discernment, and common study.
