

PITTSBURGH THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
Faculty Position in the History of Christianity

Pittsburgh Theological Seminary invites applications for a faculty position in the History of Christianity. Applications received by February 1, 2016, will be given priority, but review of applications will continue until the position is filled.

A graduate institution of the Presbyterian Church (USA), Pittsburgh Theological Seminary is committed to the formation of women and men for theologically reflective ministry and to scholarship in service to the church and the world.

The person selected for this position will be responsible for teaching introductory and elective courses in the History of Christianity in the Seminary's degree and continuing education programs. The successful candidate will have evidence of outstanding teaching, a commitment to theological education, a record of strong scholarship, and the ability to work collegially within institutions. This person will be an active participant in the life of a Christian community.

Candidates will be required to teach across the history curriculum, including introductory courses in Early, Reformation, and Modern Church History. The candidate's field of specialization within the history of Christianity is open but preference will be given to candidates with competence in Reformation and/or World Christianity.

This is a tenure track position and rank is open. A Ph.D. or its equivalent at time of appointment is preferred. International candidates, women, and members of historically underrepresented groups are especially encouraged to apply. Send application letter, CV, and letters of reference to the Dean of Faculty at facultysearch@pts.edu.

Participating in God's ongoing mission in the world, Pittsburgh Theological Seminary is a community of Christ joining in the Spirit's work of forming and equipping both people for ministries familiar and yet to unfold and communities present and yet to be gathered.
