COURSE DESCRIPTION:

An introduction to those books of the New Testament associated with the letter-form (the Pauline corpus, Hebrews, the Petrine epistles, Jude and Revelation), showing their significance in the Church and the world today. Special attention is given to the specific content of these books, to their particular genres, to the life and theology of Paul, and to the methods used in the critical study of these books (literary, socio-historical, rhetorical), as well as to the question of pseudepigraphy.

CLASS OBJECTIVES:

1. gain knowledge of the contents of various New Testament epistles and the Apocalypse as well as the life and theology of Paul;
2. understand the Jewish and Greco-Roman contexts of these documents;
3. become familiar with diverse approaches of modern biblical criticism, including rhetorical, literary, socio-rhetorical, and ideological approaches;
4. develop skills necessary for close, careful exegesis of primary sources and for the evaluation of contemporary debates in the study of the New Testament;
5. gain a deeper appreciation for these texts as Christian Scripture in the life of the Church today.
