Kristine Haig

Co-Pastor, First Presbyterian Church
Morgantown, W.Va.

Sunday, September 22 -
Friday, September 27, 2013

ABOUT THE PROGRAM

Our eyes truly are a “window to the soul.” Human beings take in most of our information through sight, and we can experience a sense of the Sacred when in the presence of beauty—whether in a light-filled sanctuary, at a museum, or on your back porch as you watch a hummingbird at your feeder or a child asleep in your arms. Many religions have intentionally used visual elements in faith formation (Think of great cathedrals with stained glass depictions of biblical scenes!) and in meditation (as in the creation of Tibetan sand mandalas). In this class, we will explore the possibilities for opening our souls to God through paintings and photography, meditation with drawing, and attending to visual images evoked by literature.

INSTRUCTOR

For over 10 years she wrote a monthly column for Presbyterians Today, and she regularly provides leadership at conferences. A former university instructor in psychology, Kris currently teaches New Testament at Waynesburg University.
