YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD SEMINARY

Join Pittsburgh Seminary's hybrid master's program from your neighborhood. Stay in your context while being formed in our community—with weekly online courses and in-person gatherings each semester.

The hybrid program allows students maximum flexibility to learn both in-person and through weekly synchronous online classes. You can plan your schedule to fit your individual needs. Students desiring weekly in-person courses can opt for a more traditional residential program with fewer hybrid courses. Distance learners can complete their program by enrolling in only hybrid courses.

The Seminary's hybrid program operates with two crucial assumptions: first, good theological education requires a community of engagement—one in which faculty and students have significant opportunities for interaction, diverse students can learn from each other, intellectual and pastoral skills are honed, and spiritual growth is supported through a variety of shared practices.

Second, for students enrolled in hybrid and online programs—sometimes referred to as rooted learners—their home context is a primary site of student formation.

HEAR FROM OUR STUDENTS

SARITA ROBINSON

I am an out-of-state student, and commuting several days a week is not practical (time, gas, wear and tear on vehicle, finding someone to look after loved ones). In the hybrid program, I get to be part of the online interaction and discussion with classmates and professors, and I get to be with them in person.

NAOMI JOHNSON

As a working mother who also happens to be an active member of a church ministry, and in the PTS community, the hybrid program helps with work-life-student balance.

JACQUELINE BOERSEMA

The hybrid program makes seminary feasible for students working full-time. Beyond that, it was the hospitality of the administrative staff, the intellect and care of the faculty, and the strong theological curriculum that made me know that PTS will equip me to pursue my vocational goals.
