RESIDENTIAL LEARNING

LIVING ON CAMPUS, LEARNING IN COMMUNITY

At Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, the residential experience is not just about where you live—it's about how you grow in faith and community. Living on campus offers opportunities for connection, collaboration, and friendship, all within a supportive environment that fosters a deep sense of belonging. We embrace hospitality, extending from our neighbors on campus to Pittsburgh and around the world.

Students consistently tell us they chose PTS because of our unique, close-knit community. Whether continuing conversations after class, sharing meals at a faculty member's home, worshipping in chapel, or studying together in the library, by living on campus, you benefit from the impactful experiences of learning in fellowship.

STUDENT HOUSING

We offer affordable and conveniently located housing options, with a wide range of housing units and floor plans available. Here, you can access spaces that support your personal needs and provide relationship-building opportunities. If you receive need-based aid, you may also qualify for a housing grant to cover the cost further.

HEAR FROM OUR STUDENTS

STEFFAN JOHNSON

The in-person community at PTS is one of my favorite experiences. Whether the casual nod and wave or a deep conversation, engaging with students on campus and forming a community introduces another level to seminary by genuinely learning from others outside of the classroom.

HANNAH OSTLUND

I appreciate most the way we meld as a community during events, lunches, and everything in between. We get to know our professors, staff, and PTS community as a whole on a much deeper level when we get the chance to be in fellowship with one another.
